INTERESTING INFO

(provided by John Lobota)

History We Call Home - listen on your phone, tablet or computer. There are five episodes to listen to right now with the next one about Al Capone in Deerfield Beach.

<https://www.wlrn.org/century>

Every two weeks our local public radio posts a segment of History We Call Home. The series “History We Call Home: 100 Years of South Florida” will run throughout the year and will highlight locales across the region. The reporters spotlight the moments, ideas and people that made these cities part of our community's fabric over the past century.

A century ago, the region experienced a land boom when investors and developers from around the country came down on trains and automobiles and started building cities where once there was swampland, farms and small settlements. Cities sprang up almost overnight. Thanks to a burgeoning post-war economy, entrepreneurial spirit and good old fashioned Florida glamour, the area's population shot up to the hundreds of thousands.

FUTURE HUNTS

During the summer months, no planned hunts are scheduled due to the intense heat. Organized hunts will resume in September. Please put your thinking caps on and bring to the meetings your ideas for future hunt locations.
